If you love Eleanor and Park, Hazel and August, and Mia and Adam, you'll love the story of Maddie, a girl who is literally allergic to the outside world, and Ollie, the boy who moves in the next door . . . and becomes the biggest risk she has ever taken. This groundbreaking and heartfelt debut novel unfolds through vignettes, diary entries, illustrations and more. My illness is as rare as it is famous. Basically, I'm allergic to the world. I haven't left my house, I haven't left my house in seventeen years. The only people I've ever seen are my mom and my nurse, Carla. But one day next door comes a moving truck. I look out the window and I see him. He is tall, thin and wearing an all-black T-shirt, black jeans, black sneakers and a black knitted hat that completely covers his hair. He catches me looking and looking at me. I was looking back. His name is Ollie. Maybe we can't predict the future, but we can predict some things. For example, I'll fall in love with Ollie, of course. It's almost going to be a disaster. Imagine a world where you were born with an illness. A disease that prevents you from leaving your home. Understanding the nature of your illness, you follow every instruction your mother asked for. To believe that every decision she has made is in your best interest. A new family comes next door, and with them comes your potential first love. Are you listening to everything your mother told you to protect you? Or risk everything for love? All books PDF Plot from an early age, Madeleine Whittier was diagnosed with severe combined immunodeficiency or SCID. This disease makes her severely allergic to most substances in our world. As a result, she spent most of her 18 years of life secluded in a sterilized home with her mother Paula. Fortunately, Madeleine at least has the company of Carla, her personal nurse hired by her mother. Madeleine's life begins to turn the page when a new family lives in their neighborhood. From her window, Madeleine notices the family; mother, father and two teenage children. After the new family has settled in, the mother sends her children to deliver the cake to Madeleine's house. Paula does not take their family present or let them enter her house for fear that they might contaminate her daughter. This left a young man who Madeleine had learned as Ollie very disappointed. In addition, Ollie's father also gets angry and throws a cake at Ollie out of frustration. According to Madeleine, the father of a neighboring family has problems with alcohol, as well as problems with anger. He often shouts at his family, creating very harsh conditions for them. Madeleine also learns the name of Ollie's younger sister, Cara. Most importantly, she realizes that Ollie's bedroom is the exact opposite of her and often takes time to rush at it. Ollie, out of her own desire to meet Madeleine, writes her email address in the window of her bedroom. The two quickly become friends from the dispatch to each other. Madeleine becomes amazed that she begs Carl to let Ollie visit her. After a while Carla eventually agrees and Madeleine has her first meeting with Ollie. After the meeting, Madeleine is convinced that she will fall in love with Ollie, but is not sure if to continue meeting him as she may end up heartbroken. She decides, however, to continue to meet with him, and one of their visits explains the circumstances of her family. Her father and brother were killed when she was a child, and her mother received money from a subsequent legal settlement. This allowed her mother to build the sterilized house in which she now lives. Ollie also begins to discuss the difficulties of his family, where he talks about his father's alcoholism and domestic violence problems. Madeleine spends even more time talking to Ollie, and as a result she spends less and less time talking to her mother. Carla worries about this model and informs Madeleine that she neglects her relationship with her mother. Madeleine is determined to maintain her relationship with Ollie, but promises to spend more time with her mother. The domestic violence Ollie spoke of becomes very obvious to Madeleine. One day she witnesses how her father punched Ollie in the face. This makes her go out for the first time in her life to Ollie's assistant. However, her mother quickly dragged her into her home. After discovering Madeleine's secret relationship with Ollie, her mother found her, and also fired Carla. Madeleine is forced to return to her old life routine before her interaction with Ollie. She unfortunately no longer finds such a life satisfying and sneaks out of her house to try to convince Ollie to run away with her. She is determined to do so, even if it costs her a living. How she even lies Ollie, assuming that she has pills that will help her cope with the disease. The couple make their way to Hawaii and after arriving in Maui spend the whole day together enjoying various activities. There, fortunately, there seems to be no sign of the consequences and later that night the two confess their love for each other and sleep together. In the early morning of the next day Madeleine wakes up with severe abdominal pain and is quickly taken to the nearest hospital for treatment. Madeleine is very close to death, but she manages to survive. Paula makes her way to Hawaii after hearing the situation and taking Madeleine home. Madeleine is once again expected to be grounded, and when she allowed internet privileges once again she contacts Oly. She informs him that she can't contact him as it's too painful for her to think about living with him she can't have. Some time after Madeleine peek out of the window to notice Ollie and his mother and sister are moving away from their abusive father, who brings some peace to her. In the weeks that follow, Madeleine receives a letter from the doctor who treated her in an emergency. Throughout the email he reveals the truth about her that leads to a confrontation with her mother.Source://librisnotes.blogspot.com/2016/01/everything-everything-by-nicola-yoon.html us a comment or as if you liked this brief summary.
